

Reading Exercise 3: Identifying Counterarguments Spring 2019

In the reading, find a spot in the text where the author is not presenting his or her own view, but that of an opponent. Try to determine why the author is saying this, what is the purpose of presenting this other view.

Answer the following questions:

1. Determine where the author is presenting a view which is not his or her own. Copy down the relevant lines.
2. What made you think this wasn't the author's view?
3. Then: when does the philosopher return to his or her own point of view? How do you know?
4. Does he or she assess the point of view presented? What does s/he say? (Copy it down)
